508,740

of healthy and nutritious meals provided to the most vulnerable populations in the Greater Triangle. With schools closing and income reduced as a result of wide-spread layoffs, access to food has emerged as the most urgent immediate need for families, according to Rapid Response Fund applications for funding.

of people provided with emergency rental assistance and emergency housing services to prevent displacement and ensure a safe, affordable place to stay.

23,214

of children provided with the resources necessary to support their educational needs while out of school. In-home book deliveries, providing computers, and online tutoring are some of the ways that United Way's Rapid Response Fund recipients are adjusting to meet the needs of the community.

of adults that received the necessary medications, products, and services to address preexisting health conditions and ensure their physical and mental health during isolation and contact restrictions.

United Way of the Greater Triangle launched a Rapid Response Fund on March 16 in direct response to the COVID-19 pandemic. Designed to support critical resources for local individuals and families, this fund will provide emergency financial assistance for nonprofit organizations offering critical resources including food, hygiene supplies, childcare, housing support, connectivity for low-income families, and more during area-wide times of crisis.
